urry (hŭr′ i) [imit.], v.t. To impel to greater speed, to accelerate; to push forward; to drive or cause to act or do carelessly or precipitately; (Coal-min.) to draw (a wagon) in a mine. v.i. To hasten; to move or act with excessive haste. n. The act of hurrying; urgency, bustle, precipitation; eagerness (to do etc.); (colloq.) need for haste; a river-staging for loading vessels, or a shute for loading coal into a hold; (Mus.) a tremolo passage by the orchestra accompanying a dramatic situation. not in a hurry: (colloq.) Not soon, not easily. hurry-scurry, adv. In a hurry or bustle; confusedly; n. A confused bustle; v.i. To make haste, to act with disorderly haste. hurryingly, adv. hurried, a. Impelled to speed; done in a hurry; hasty. hurriedly, adv. hurriedness, n. hurrier, n.

ırst (hĕrst) [A.-S. hyrst (cp. M.H.G. hurst, L.G. and M.Dut. horst)], n. A wood, a thicket; a wooded eminence (a frequent element in place-names); a hillock, a knoll; (local) a sandbank in a river.

ırt (hĕrt) [prob. from O.F. hurter (F. heurter), to knock or push, etym. doubtful], v.t. To cause pain, injury, loss, or detriment to; to damage; to grieve or distress (as the feelings). v.i. (usu. impers.) To be painful, to cause pain. n. A wound; an injury, damage, harm; anything that causes pain, injury, or detriment. hurter (1), n. One who hurts. hurtful, a. Causing hurt; mischievous, noxious. hurtfully, adv. hurtfulness, n. hurtless, n. hurtlessly, adv. hurtlessness, n.

urter (2) (hĕr′ tĕr) [F. hurteoir, as prec.], n. A timber placed at the foot of a slope or platform to prevent the wheels of gun-carriages from injuring the parapet; the shoulder or the reinforcing piece on an axle.

urtle (hĕrtl) [prob. a freq. of HURT], v.t. To strike or dash against with violence; to move or whirl with great force. v.i. To rush with great force and noise; to make a crashing noise. n. A loud, crashing noise; a collision, a shock.

hurtleberry [var. of WHORTLEBERRY].

husband (hŭz′ bănd) [A.-S. hūsbonda (hūs, HOUSE, bonda, from Icel. bōndi, from būa, to dwell)], n. A man joined to a woman in marriage; *a good and frugal manager; (Naut.) a ship's husband [see SHIP]. v.t. To manage with frugality, to economize; *to till; *to cultivate; (facet.) to provide with a husband; to be a husband to, to marry. husbandage, n. Commission to the ship's husband. husbandhood, -ship, n. husbandless, a. Having no husband. husband-like, a. husbandly, a. Frugal, economical; husbandlike. husbandman, n. A farmer, a tiller of the soil; *a good manager or economist. husbandry, n. The business of a farmer, agriculture; the products of farming; economy, esp. domestic; frugality, careful management.

hush (1) (hŭsh) [from obs. adj. husht, imit., cp. HIST, WHIST (1)], v.t. To make silent; to repress the noise of. v.i. To be still or silent. n. Silence, stillness. int. Silence! be still! a.* Silent, quiet. to hush up: To keep concealed, to suppress. hushaby, int. Used in lulling to sleep. hush-hush: (colloq.) Very secret. hush-money, n. A bribe to secure silence (about a scandal etc.).

hush (2) (hŭsh) [onomat.], n. A smooth, swift rush of water; (Mining) a rush of water let out from a dam. v.t. (Mining) To let out (water) from a dam, esp. to clear away soil, stones, etc.

husk (hŭsk) [perh. from A.-S. hūs, HOUSE (cp. E.Fris. hüske, G. häuschen, little house)], n. The dry external integument of certain fruits or seeds; (fig.) a mere frame, shell, or worthless part; a disease in cattle. v.t. To strip the husk from. husked, a. Having or covered with a husk; stripped of a husk. husker, n. husking, n. The act of stripping off husks; (Am.) a husking-bee. husking-bee, n. (Am.) A gathering of friends at a farmer's house to husk maize. husky (1), a. Abounding in husks; consisting of or resembling husks; rough; dry, hoarse, rough and harsh in sound; (Am. colloq.) strong, stalwart. huskily, adv. huskiness, n.

husky (2) (hŭs′ ki) [perh. corr. of ESKIMO], n. (Canada) An Indian sledge-dog; an Eskimo; the Eskimo language.

huso (hū′ sō) [med. L., from O.H.G.], n. The beluga or great sturgeon, Acipenser huso.

hussar (hu zar′) [Hung. huszar, O.Serv. husar, Ital. corsaro, or late Gr. choursarios, med. L. cursārius, CORSAIR], n. Originally a light horseman, and applied to the national cavalry of Hungary; now, a soldier of a light cavalry regiment in European armies.

hussif [HOUSEWIFE].

Hussite (hŭs′ īt) [John Hus (1369-1415), -ITE], n. A follower of John Hus, Bohemian religious reformer.

hussy (hŭz′ i) [corr. of HOUSEWIFE], n. A pert, forward girl; a worthless woman; *a housewife.

husting (hŭs′ ting) [A.-S. hūsting, Icel. hūsthing (hūs, HOUSE, thing, an assembly)], n. (Hist.) A meeting for deliberative purposes, a council; (pl.) a platform from which, before the Ballot Act of 1872, candidates addressed the electors during parliamentary elections; proceedings at an election; a court held in the City of London, formerly the principal and highest court in the City.

hustle (hŭsl) [Dut. hutselen, freq. of hutsen], v.t. To shake together in confusion; to jostle, to push violently; (Am.) to hurry or cause to move quickly. v.i. To press roughly; to move (along) with difficulty; (Am.) to act with energy; to give the appearance of being busy; to push one's way in an unceremonious or unscrupulous way. n. Hustling. hustler, n.

huswife, etc. [HOUSEWIFE].

hut (hŭt) [F. hutte, from M.H.G. hütte], n. A small, rude house, a mean dwelling; a cabin, a hovel; (Mil.) a small temporary camp-shelter or house. v.t. To place (troops) in huts. v.i. To lodge in huts. hutment, n. (Mil.) A camp of huts.

hutch (hŭch) [O.F. huche, low L. hūtica, etym. doubtful], n. A coop or box-like pen for small animals; a chest, box, bin, or other receptacle; (fig.) a hut, a hovel, a small mean house; a kneading-trough; a bolting-hutch; (Mining) a truck, a trough for washing ore. v.t. To store, as in a hutch; (Mining) to wash in a hutch.

Hutchinsonian (hŭch in sō′ ni ăn) [Hutchinson, -IAN], a. Of or pertaining to John Hutchinson (1674–1737), who held that the Bible furnished a basis for science, philosophy, etc., or to Anne Hutchinson (1590–1643), an Antinomian who emigrated to New England. n. A follower of either of these.

Huttonian (hŭ tō′ ni ăn) [James Hutton (1726–1796), geologist], a. (Geol.) Of or pertaining to Hutton and his theory of the plutonic or volcanic origin of unstratified rocks. n. An adherent of this theory. Huttonianism, n.

huzza (hu za′) [imit.], int. A cry of joy, applause, etc. v.i. To shout 'huzza.' v.t. To applaud or greet with this cry. n. A shout of 'huzza.'

huzzy [HUSSY].

hyacinth (hī′ ă sinth) [F. hyacinthe, L. hyacinthus, Gr. huakinthos, a flower, prob. iris or larkspur], n. A plant of the genus Hyacinthus, esp. H. Orientalis, a beautiful bulbous-rooted flowering plant of many varieties and many colours; a flower mentioned by the ancients, said to have sprung from the blood of the youth Hyacinth, beloved of Apollo, and to bear the letters AI (alas!) on its petals; a precious stone known to the ancients; (Min.) a brownish, orange, or reddish variety of zircon. hyacine, n. (Spens.) Hyacinth. hyacinthian (hī ă sin′ thi ăn), hyacinthine (hī ă sin′ thin, -thīn), a. Resembling the hyacinth (the flower or the gem) in colour; (of hair) curling richly (after an epithet of Homer's of doubtful meaning).

Hyades (hī′ ă dēz), Hyads (hī′ ădz) [Gr. Huades, cogn. with hus, a sow (pop. derived from huein, to rain)], n.pl. A cluster of stars, including Aldebaran, in the head of Taurus, supposed by the ancients to bring rain when they rose with the sun.

hyena [HYENA].

hyalin (hī′ ă lin) [Gr. hualos, glass], n. (Chem.) An opalescent nitrogenous compound similar to chitin, the chief constituent of hydatid cysts. hyalose, n. A sugar allied to glucose obtained from this.

hyaline (hī′ ă lin, -lin) [L. hyalinus, Gr. hualinos, from hualos, glass or crystal], a. Glassy, transparent, crystalline; (Science) vitreous. n. The glassy surface of the sea; the clear sky or atmosphere; (Biol.) the pellucid substance determining the fission of cells. hyalescence (hī ă les′ ĕns), n. The process of becoming transparent. hyalescent, a. hyalite (hī′ ă lit), n. (Min.) A glassy variety of opal. hyalitis (-lī′ tis), n. (Path.) Inflammation of the vitreous matter of the eye.

hyalo- [Gr. hualos, glass], comb. form. Colourless, transparent; pertaining to or resembling glass. hyalograph (hī′ ă lō-, hī ăl′ ă grăf), n. An instrument for etching on glass. hyalography (-log′ rā fi), n. hyaloid (hī′ ă loid), a. Glassy, vitriform; n. (Anat.) The hyaloid membrane. hyaloid coat or membrane: The transparent membrane enclosing the vitreous humour of the eye. hyaloid body or humour: This vitreous humour.

hyalose [HYALIN]. hybernate [HIBERNATE]. Hyblæan (hib lē′ ăn), Hyblan (hib′ lăn) [Hyblæus, from Hybla, Gr. Hublē], a. Of or pertaining to Hybla, a town in ancient Sicily, famous for its honey.

hybrid (hī′ brid) [L. hybrida, mongrel], a. Produced by the union of two distinct species, varieties, etc.; produced by cross fertilization or interbreeding; mongrel, cross-bred; (fig.) derived from incongruous sources. n. A mongrel; an animal or plant produced by the union of two distinct species, varieties, etc.; one of mixed nationality; (Philol.) a word compounded from different languages; anything composed of heterogeneous parts or elements. hybridity (hī brid′ i ti), n. The state or quality of being hybrid. hybridism (hī′ brid hib′ ri dizm), n. Hybridity; the act or process of interbreeding, hybridization. hybridist, n. hybridize, v.t. To produce by the union of different species or varieties; to produce by cross-fertilization or interbreeding. v.i. To produce hybrids, to be capable of cross-fertilization or interbreeding. hybridizable, a. hybridization (-zā′ shŭn), n. hybridizer, n. hybridous, a.

hydatid (hī′ dă-, hid′ ă tid) [Gr. hydat-, -tidos, a watery vesicle, cogn. with hudōr, water], n. (Path.) A watery cyst occurring in animal tissue, esp. one resulting from the development of the embryo of a tapeworm. hydatic (hī dăt′ ik), a. hydatidiform (hī tid′ i fôrm), hydatiform (hī dăt′ i fôrm). Resembling a hydatid.

hydatism (hī′ dă tizm) [Gr. hudatismos, from hudōr, hudatis, water], n. (Med.) A sound produced by the effusion of fluid in a cavity of the body. hydato-, comb. form.

hydatoid (hī′ dă toid) [as prec., -OID], a. Resembling water. n. (Anat.) The membrane surrounding the aqueous humour of the eye, or the humour itself.

hydr- [HYDRO-].

dra (hī′ drà) [L., from Gr. hudra, cogn. with hudōr, water], n. (Gr. Myth.) A water-serpent with many heads, each of which, when cut off, was succeeded by two, destroyed by Hercules; a water-serpent; an evil or calamity difficult to extinguish; (Astron.) one of the fifteen ancient southern constellations; (Zool.) a genus of freshwater polyps which multiply when divided. hydra-headed, a. Having many heads; hence, difficult to get rid of; spreading. hydra-tainted, a. Poisonous, deadly. hydroid, a. Hydra-like; (Zool.) allied to the genus Hydra; n. (Zool.) A hydrozoan; a member of the genus Hydra.

dracid (hī drăs′ id) [HYDR-, ACID], n. (Chem.) An acid containing hydrogen but no oxygen. a. Of or pertaining to a hydracid.

dragogue (hī′ drà gog) [F., from L. hydragōgus, Gr. hudragōgos (HYDR-, agein, to lead)], n. (Med.) An active purgative, causing a large secretion of fluid.

drangea (hī drān′ jà) [HYDR-, Gr. angeion, angos, a vessel], n. (Bot.) A genus of flowering shrubs of the saxifrage family, from Asia and America.

drant (hī′ drànt) [HYDR-, -ANT], n. A spout or discharge-pipe, usu. with a nozzle for attaching hose, connected with a water-main, for drawing water.

drastine (hī drăs′ tīn) [mod. L. Hydrastis, -INE], n. (Chem.) A bitter alkaloid prepared from the root of a North American plant, Hydrastis Canadensis, used as a tonic and febrifuge.

drate (hī′ drāt) [HYDR-, -ATE], n. (Chem.) A compound of water with an element or another compound. v.t. (-drāt) To combine with water to form a hydrate. hydration (hī drā′ shùn), n.

draulic (hī draw′ lik) [L. hydraulicus, Gr. hudraulikos (HYDR-, aulos, pipe)], a. Pertaining to fluids in motion, or to the power exerted by water conveyed through pipes or channels; operating or operated by such power. n.pl. The science treating of water or other liquids in motion, esp. the conveyance of water through pipes etc., and the practical application of water-power. hydraulic cement or mortar: A cement or mortar which hardens under water. hydraulic lift: A lift worked by means of water-power. hydraulic press: A heavy pressing machine worked by water-power. hydraulic ram: A machine by which the fall of a column of water supplies power to elevate a portion of the water to a greater height than that of the source. hydraulically, adv. hydraulician (-lish′ ăn), n. hydraulico-, comb. form.

dria (hī′ dri à) [L., from Gr. hudria, from hudōr, water], n. (pl. -iæ) (Gr. Ant.) A water-jar or pitcher. hydriad, n. A water-nymph.

dric (hī′ drik) [HYDR-, -IC], a. (Chem.) Of, pertaining to, or containing hydrogen in chemical combination. hydride, n. A compound of hydrogen with another element or radical. hydriodic (hī dri od′ ik) [HYDR-, IODINE], a. Of, pertaining to, or containing hydrogen and iodine in chemical combination hydriodate, hydriodide (hī drī′ ò dāt, -dīd), n.

hydro (hī′ drō) [short for HYDROPATHIC], n. (colloq.) A hydropathic establishment.

hydro-, hydr- [Gr. hudōr hudros, water], comb. form. Pertaining to or connected with water; (Chem.) containing hydrogen in chemical combination; (Min.) containing water as a constituent; (Path.) dropsical; (Zool.) belonging to the genus Hydra or the class Hydrozoa. hydro-aeroplane (hī drō âr′ ò plān) [AEROPLANE], n. An aeroplane adapted for rising from or descending upon the surface of water. hydro-barometer (hī drō bà rom′ ė tėr) [BAROMETER], n. An instrument for determining the depth of the sea by its pressure. hydrobromic (hī drò brō′ mik) [BROMIC], a. (Chem.) Composed of hydrogen and bromine. hydrobromate, hydrobromide (-brō′ māt, -mīd), n. hydrocarbon (hī drò kar′ bòn) [CARBON], n. (Chem.) A compound of carbon and hydrogen. hydrocarbide, n. hydrocarbonaceous (-nā′ shùs), a. hydrocarbonate, n. hydrocarbonic, -ous (-bon′ ik, -kar′ bò nùs), a. hydrocarburet (-kar′ bū rėt) [CARBURET], n. hydrocele (hī′ drò sēl) [-CELE], n. (Path.) A watery tumour; dropsy of the testicle or of the scrotum. hydrocephalus (hī drò sef′ à lùs) [Gr. hudrokephalon (kephalē, head)], n. (Path.) Dropsy of or water on the brain. hydrocephalic (sė făl′ ik), hydrocephaloid, hydrocephalous (-sef′ à loid, -lùs), a. Pertaining or akin to hydrocephalus.

hydrochloric (hī drò klōr′ ik) [HYDRO-, CHLORIC], n. (Chem.) A compound of chlorine and hydrogen.

hydrocyanic (hī drò sī ăn′ ik) [HYDRO-, CYANIC], a. (Chem.) Formed by the combination of hydrogen and cyanogen. hydrocyanic acid: Prussic acid. hydrocyanate (-sī′ à nāt), n.

hydrodynamics (hī drò di-, -dī năm′ iks) [HYDRO-, DYNAMICS], n. The science which treats of the dynamics of water and other liquids. hydrodynamic, -al (-dī-, -di năm′ ik, -ăl), a. (Phys.) Pertaining to hydrodynamics; derived from the force of water.

hydro-electric (hī drò è lek′ trik) [HYDRO-, ELECTRIC], a. Pertaining to electricity generated from water-power. hydro-electricity (-tris′ i ti), n. hydro-electrisation (-zā′ shùn), n. (Med.) hydro-electrothermic (-thėr′ mik), a. Pertaining to a method of electric welding.

hydro-extractor (hī drò ek străk′ tòr) [HYDRO-, EXTRACTOR], n. An apparatus for removing moisture from yarns and fabrics during the process of manufacture.

hydrofluoric (hī drò flù or′ ik) [HYDRO-, FLUORIC], a. (Chem.) Consisting of fluorine and hydrogen.

hydrogel (hī′ drò jel) [HYDRO-, gel-, from L. gelāre, to freeze], n. (Biol.) Protoplasm comprising gelatine or albumen in a jelly-like state with water filling the interstices.

hydrogen (hī′ drò jėn) [F. hydrogène (HYDRO-, -GEN)], n. (Chem.) An invisible, inflammable, gaseous element, the lightest of all known bodies, which in combination with oxygen produces water. hydrogenate, -enize (hī droj' ē nāt, -nīz), v.t. (Chem.) To cause to combine with hydrogen; to charge with hydrogen. hydrogenation, -genization (-na' shŭn, -zā' shŭn), n. hydrogenous (hī droj' ē nŭs), a.

hydrography (hī drog' rà fi) [HYDRO-, -GRAPHY], n. The science and art of studying, surveying, and mapping seas, lakes, rivers, and other waters, and their physical features, tides, currents, etc. hydrograph (hī' drō grăf), n. A chart or diagram setting forth hydrographic phenomena. hydrographer (hī drog' rà fèr), n. hydrographic, -al (hī drō grăf' ik, -ăl), a. hydrographically, adv.

hydroid [HYDRA].

hydrokinetic (hī drō kī net' ik) [HYDRO-, KINETIC], a. Relating to the motion of liquids. hydrokinetics, n. The kinetics of liquids.

hydrology (hī drol' ò ji) [HYDRO-, -LOGY], n. The science of water, its properties, phenomena, laws, and distribution. hydrological (-loj' i kăl), a. hydrologist (-drol' ò jist), n.

hydrolysis (hī drol' i sis) [HYDRO-, Gr. lusis, loosening, from luein, to loose], n. (Chem.) Chemical decomposition of substances by a process involving the fixation of the elements of water in distinct compounds. hydrolytic (-lit' ik), a.

hydromel (hī' drō mel) [L., from Gr. hudromeli (HYDRO-, meli, honey)], n. A drink consisting of honey diluted with water.

hydrometeor (hī drō mē' tė òr) [HYDRO-, METEOR], n. (Meteor.) A meteorological phenomenon produced by water-vapour, as rain, snow, etc. hydrometeoric (-or' ik), a. hydrometeorology (-ol' ò ji), n. hydrometeorological (-loj' i kăl), a.

hydrometer (hī drom' ė tèr) [HYDRO-, METER], n. An instrument for determining the specific gravity of liquids, or solids by means of flotation. hydrometric, -al (-met' rik, -ăl), a. hydrometry (-drom' ė tri), n. The art or process of measuring the specific gravity of fluids etc.

hydromotor (hī drō mō' tòr) [HYDRO-, MOTOR], n. A motor for propelling vessels by means of a jet of water emitted at the stern.

hydromyd (hī' drō mid) [HYDRO-, Gr. mus, MOUSE], n. One of the Australian genus Hydromys comprising the water-rats and beaver-rats.

hydropathy (hī drop' à thi) [HYDRO-, -PATHY], n. The treatment of disease by the internal and external application of water. hydropath (hī' drō păth), hydropathist (hī drop' à thist), n. One who practises or believes in hydropathy. hydropathic (-păth' ik), a. Pertaining to hydropathy; n. An establishment for the hydropathic treatment of disease.

hydrophane (hī' drō fān) [HYDRO-, Gr. phanēs, clear, from phainein, to show], n. (Min.) An opal which becomes translucent when immersed in water. hydrophanous (hī drof à nŭs), a. Becoming more translucent or brighter when immersed in water.

hydrophid (hī' drō fid) [HYDR-, Gr. ophis, serpent], n. (Zool.) One of the Hydrophidæ, a family of small sea-snakes from Indian and Australian seas.

hydrophobia (hī drō fō' bi à) [L., from Gr. hudrophobia (HYDRO-, -PHOBIA)], n. An unnatural dread of water, a symptom of rabies resulting from the bite of a rabid animal; rabies; dread of water. hydrophobic (-fob' ik), a.

hydrophone (hī' drō fōn) [HYDRO-, Gr. phōnē, voice, sound], n. An instrument for detecting sound by water, used in naval warfare to prevent surprise by torpedo-boats etc.; an instrument for detecting the sound of running water, used to discover leaks etc.

hydrophore (hī' drō fôr) [Gr. hudrophoros (HYDRO-, -PHORE)], n. An instrument for obtaining specimens of water from any given depth.

hydropic (hī drop' ik) [M.E. and O.F. ydropique, L. hydrōpicus, Gr. hudrōpikos, from hudrops (hudōr, water)], a. Dropsical; resembling dropsy. hydropical, *hydroptic, a. Hydropic. hydropsy (hī' drop si), n. Dropsy.

hydroplane (hī' drō plān) [HYDRO-, PLANE], n. A light motor-boat capable of rising partially above the surface of water; a flat fin for governing the vertical direction of a submarine; a plane for lifting a boat partially from the water, so as to diminish the resistance and increase the speed [cp. HYDRO-AEROPLANE, see HYDRO-].

hydropneumatic (hī drō nū măt' ik) [HYDROPNEUMATIC], a. Pertaining to or produced by the combined action of water and air.

hydroponics (hī drō pon' iks) [HYDRO-; Gr. ponos, work], n.pl. (Agric.) The cultivation of plants without soil in water containing chemicals.

hydropsy [HYDROPIC].

hydroquinone (hī' drō kwi' nōn) [HYDRO-QUINONE], n. (Phot.) A compound derived from quinone, employed in the development of photographs.

hydroscope (hī' drō skōp) [Gr. hudroskopos (HYDRO-, -SCOPE)], n. A water-clock or clepsydra; a hygroscope.

hydrosol (hī' drō sol) [HYDRO-, -sol, from SOLUTION], n. (Chem.) A solution of a colloid in water.

hydrosome (hī' drō sōm) [HYDRA, Gr. sōma, body], n. (Zool.) The colonial organism of a hydrozoan. hydrosomal, hydrosomatous (-sō' mal, -mā tŭs), a.

ydrostat (hī' drō stăt) [HYDRO-, Gr. statos, standing], n. An electrical contrivance for detecting the presence of water; an apparatus to prevent the explosion of steam-boilers.

ydrostatic, -al (hī drō stăt' ik, -al) [HYDRO-, STATIC], a. Pertaining or relating to hydrostatics; pertaining to the pressure and equilibrium of liquids at rest. hydrostatic balance: A balance for weighing substances in water to ascertain their specific gravities. hydrostatic paradox: The principle that any quantity of liquid, however small, may be made to balance any weight. hydrostatic press: A hydraulic press. hydrostatically, adv. hydrostatics, n. The science which treats of the pressure and equilibrium of liquids at rest.

ydrosulphuric (hī drō sŭl fū' rik) [HYDRO-, SULPHURIC], a. (Chem.) Containing hydrogen and sulphur.

ydrotelluric (hī drō tē lū' rik) [HYDRO-, TELLURIC], a. (Chem.) Composed of hydrogen and tellurium.

ydrotherapeutic (hī drō ther ă pū' tik) [HYDRO-, THERAPEUTIC], a. (Med.) Pertaining to the therapeutic application of water; hydropathic. hydrotherapeutics, hydrotherapy (-ther' ă pi), n.

ydrothermal (hī drō thĕr' mal) [HYDRO-, THERMAL], a. Relating to the action of heated water, esp. on the materials of the earth's crust.

ydrothorax (hī drō thōr' ăks) [HYDRO-, THORAX], n. (Path.) Dropsy of the chest.

ydrotropism (hī drot' rō pizm) [HYDRO-, Gr. -tropos, a turning, from trepein, to turn], n. (Bot.) The tendency in the growing parts of plants to turn towards or away from moisture. hydrotropic (-trop' ik), a.

ydrous (hī' drŭs) [HYDR-, -OUS], a. (Chem.) Containing water.

ydroxide (hī drok' sīd) [HYDR-, OXIDE], n. (Chem.) A compound formed by the union of a basic oxide with the molecules of water; *a hydrate. hydroxy-, comb. form. Containing the radical hydroxyl. hydroxyl, n. The monad radical formed by the combination of one atom of hydrogen and one of water occurring in many chemical compounds.

ydrozoa (hī drō zō' ă) [HYDRO-, Gr. zōon (pl. zōa), an animal], n.pl. (Zool.) A class of cœlenterates, principally marine, comprising the hydra, medusa, jelly-fish, etc. hydrozoan, a. and n. hydrozoic, a.

ydruret [HYDRIDE].

yemal, etc. [HIEMAL].

yena (hī ē' nă) [L. hyæna, Gr. huaina, sow-like, from hus, a sow], n. A genus of carnivorous quadrupeds allied to the dog, with three modern species, the striped H. striata, the spotted H. crocuta, and the brown hyena, H. brunnea (the first is also called the laughing hyena); (fig.) a ferocious or treacherous person; applied also to the thylacine. hyena-dog, n. A South African quadruped, also called the hunting-dog. hyenaish, a. hyenaism, n. hyena-like, a.

permetrical (hī pĕr met′ ri kăl) [Gr. hypermetros (HYPER-, metron, METRE)], a. (Pros.) Having a redundant syllable or syllables; redundant (of such a syllable). hypermeter (hī pĕr′ mē tĕr), n.
permetropia (hī pĕr mē trō′ pi ă) [Gr. hypermetros, as prec., ōps ōpos, eye], n. (Path.) An abnormal state of the eye characterized by long-sightedness, opposed to myopia. hypermetropic (-trop′ ik), a. hyperopia (-ō′ pi ă), n. hyperopic (-op′ ik), a. peroodon (hī pĕr ō′ ō don) [Gr. huperōos, upper, superior, odous odontos, tooth], n. A genus of cetaceans comprising the bottle-nosed whales.
perphasia (hī pĕr fā′ zi ă) [HYPER-, Gr. phasis, speaking], n. (Path.) Lack of control over the organs of speech. hyperphasic (-făz′ ik), a. perphysical (hī pĕr fiz′ i kăl) [HYPER-, PHYSICAL], a. Supernatural.
perplasia (hī pĕr plā′ zi ă) [HYPER-, Gr. plasis, formation, from plassein, to mould], n. (Path.) Excessive growth due to abnormal multiplication of cells. hyperplasm (hī′ pĕr plăzm), n. hyperplastic, hyperplastic (hī pĕr plăz′ ik, -plăs′ tik), a.
persarcoma (hī pĕr sär kō′ mă) [HYPER-, SARCOMA], hypersarcosis (hī pĕr sar kō′ sis), n. (Path.) A fleshy excrescence; proud flesh.
persensitive (hī pĕr sen′ si tiv) [HYPER-, SENSITIVE], a. Excessively or morbidly sensitive. hypersensitiveness, n.
persthene (hī′ pĕrs thēn) [F. hyperstène (HYPER-, Gr. sthenos, strength)], n. (Min.) An orthorhombic, foliated, brittle mineral allied to hornblende, with a beautiful pearly lustre. hypersthenic (1) (-then′ ik), a. hypersthenite (-thē′ nīt), n. (Min.) A variety of pyroxenite mainly composed of hypersthene.
persthenia (hī pĕrs thē′ ni ă) [HYPER-, Gr. sthenos, strength], n. (Path.) A morbid condition characterized by excessive excitement of the vital powers. hypersthenic (2) (-then′ ik), a.

hyperthesis (hī pĕr′ thē sis) [Gr. hyperthesis (HYPER-, thesis, placing, from tithenai, to put)], n. (Philol.) Transposition of a letter from one syllable to another. hyperthetic (-thet′ ik), a.
hypertrophy (hī pĕr′ trō fi) [HYPER-, Gr. -trophia, from trephein, to nourish], n. Excessive development or enlargement from over-nutrition. v.t. To affect with hypertrophy. v.i. To be affected by hypertrophy. hypertrophic, -al (trof′ ik, -ăl), hypertrophous (hī pĕr′ trō fŭs), a.
hypethral [HYPÆTHRAL].
hyphen (hī′ fĕn) [L., from Gr. huphen (HYPO-, hen, one)], n. A short stroke (-) joining two words or parts of words. v.t. To join by a hyphen. hyphenic (-fen′ ik), a. hyphenate (hī′ fē nāt), hyphenize, v.t. hyphenation (-nā′ shŭn), hyphenization (-zā′ shŭn), n.
hypno- [Gr. hupnos, sleep], comb. form. hypnogenesis (hip nō jen′ ē sis) [GENESIS], n. Inducement of hypnotic sleep. hypnogeny (hip noj′ ē ni), n. hypnogenetic (-net′ ik), a. hypnology (hip nol′ ō ji) [-LOGY], n. The study of the phenomena of sleep; a treatise on sleep. hypnologist, n. hypnosis (hip nō′ sis), n. (Med.) Inducement of sleep; a morbid state of sleep; the hypnotic state. hypnotic (hip not′ ik), a. Causing sleep; soporific; of, pertaining to, or inducing hypnotism; n. A medicine which produces sleep; an opiate. hypnotism (hip′ nō tizm), n. An artificial method of inducing sleep or a state analogous to sleep; sleep artificially induced. hypnotist, n. hypnotize, v.t. To affect with hypnotism. hypnotizable (-tī′ zăbl), a. hypnotizability (-bil′ i ti), n. hypnotization (-zā′ shŭn), n. hypnotizer (-tī′ zĕr), n.
Hypnum (hip′ nŭm) [Gr. hupnon], n. (pl. -nums -na) (Bot.) A genus of pleurocarpous mosses known as feather-moss.
hypo (hī′ pō) [abbr. Sodium hyposulphite], n. (Phot.) Common term for Sodium thiosulphate, the normal fixing solution in photography.
hypo- [Gr. hupo, under], comb. form. Under, below; less than; (Chem.) denoting compounds having a lower degree of oxidation in a series. hypoblast (hip′ ō-, hī′ pō blăst) [Gr. blastos, sprout], n. (Biol.) The inmost membrane of the blastoderm. hypoblastic (-blăs′ tik), a.
hypobole (hi pob′ ō lē) [Gr. hupobolē (HYPO-, ballein, to throw)], n. (Rhet.) A mode of reasoning in which several things seemingly opposed to the argument are mentioned and then refuted.
hypobranchial (hip ō-, hī pō brăng′ ki ăl) [HYPO-, BRANCHIAL], a. (Anat.) Situated below the gills or branchiæ. n.pl. (Ichthyol.) The lower and inner part of the branchial arch.
hypocaust (hip′ ō kawst) [late L. hypocaustum, Gr. hupokauston (HYPO-, kaiein, fut. kaus-, to burn)], n. (Rom. Ant.) A space or series of channels under the floor by which heat was conducted from a furnace to heat a building, room, bath, etc.; a stove.
hypochondria (hip′ ō kon′ dri ă) [late L., pl., from Gr. hupochondria, pl., the soft parts below the cartilage (HYPO-, chondros, cartilage, esp. that of the breast-bone)], n. (Path.) A morbid condition characterized by excessive anxiety with regard to the health, and depression of spirits [see also HYPOCHONDRIUM]. hypochondriac, a. Produced or characterized by hypochondria; having a disordered mind; causing melancholy; (Anat.) pertaining to, connected with, or situated in the hypochondria; n. A person affected with hypochondria. hypochondriacal, a. hypochondriacally, adv. hypochondriasis (-drī' á sis), hypochondriacism, n. hypochondriast (-kon' dri ăst), n. hypochondrium, n. (pl. -dria) (Anat.) Either of the two regions of the abdomen situated to the right and left under the costal cartilages and short ribs.

hypocist (hip' ò-, hī' pò sist) [F. hypociste, L. hypocistis, Gr. hupokistis (HUPO-, kistos, CISTUS)], n. An astringent inspissated juice obtained from the fruit of Cytinus hypocistis, a plant from southern France.

hypocrisy (hi pok' ri si) [O.F. hypocrisie, L. hypocrisis, Gr. hupokrisis, acting of a part, from hupokrinesthai (HYPO-, krinein, to judge, decide)], n. Dissimulation; a feigning to be what one is not; a pretence to virtue or goodness. hypocrite (hip' ò krit), n. One who practises hypocrisy; a dissembler. hypocritical (hip ò krit' i kál, a. hypocritically, adv.

hypocycloid (hip ò-, hī pò sī' kloid) [HYPO-, CYCLOID], n. (Geom.) A curve generated by a point on the circumference of a circle rolling round the inside of the circumference of another circle. hypocycloidal (-kloi' dál), a.

hypoderm (hī' pò-, hip' ò dĕrm), hypoderma (hī pò-, hip ò dĕr' má) [HYPO-, Gr. derma, skin], n. (pl. -mata) (Zool.) A layer beneath the outer integument, as the inner membrane lining the elytra of beetles; (Bot.) the cellular layer beneath the epidermis of leaves etc. hypodermal (-dĕr' mál), a. Hypodermic. hypodermic (-dĕr' mik), a. Pertaining to parts underlying the skin; n. A drug introduced into the system by injection under the skin; (colloq.) a hypodermic syringe. hypodermic injection: An injection (of narcotics, antitoxins, etc.) beneath the skin. hypodermic syringe: A small syringe with a hollow needle for giving hypodermic injections. hypodermically, adv.

hypogastrium (hip ò-, hī pò găs' tri úm) [Gr. hupogastrion (HYPO-, gastēr, belly)], n. (Anat.) The middle part of the lowest zone into which the abdomen is divided. hypogastric, a. hypogastrocele [-CELE], n. (Path.) Hernia in the region of the hypogastrium.

hypogean, -ous, -geal (hip ò-, hī pò jē' án, -ús, -ál) [L. hypogēus, Gr. hypogeios (HYPO-, gē, earth)], a. Existing or growing underground; subterranean. hypogene (hip' ò-, hī' pò jēn), hypogenic (-jen' ik), a. (Geol.) Applied to rocks that were formed under the surface; plutonic.

hypogeum (hip ò-, hī pò jē' úm), n. (pl. -gea) (Arch.) A building or part of a building below the level of the ground.

hypoglossal (hip ò-, hī pò glos' ál) [HYPO-, Gr. glossa, tongue], a. Under the tongue. hypoglossal nerve: The motor nerve of the tongue. hypoglossus, n. (Anat.) The hypoglossal nerve.

hypognathous (hī pog' ná thús) [HYPO-, Gr. gnathos, jaw], a. (Ornith.) Having a lower mandible longer than the upper. hypognathism, n.

hypogynous (hi-, hī poj' i nús) [HYPO--GYNOUS], a. (Bot.) Of stamens, growing from below the base of the ovary; of plants, having the stamens so situated.

hyponasty (hip' ò-, hī' pò nās ti) [HYPO-, Gr. nastos, solid, from nassein, to press], n. (Bot.) More active growth of a plant-organ on the under side causing a tendency to upward curvature.

hypophosphate (hip ò-, hī pò fos' fát) [HYPO-PHOSPHATE], n. (Chem.) A salt of hypophosphoric acid. hypophosphite (-fit), n. A salt of hypophosphorous acid. hypophosphoric (-for' ik), hypophosphorous (-fos' fò rús), a.

hypophysis (hi-, hī pof' i sis) [Gr. hupophusis (HYPO-, phusis, from phuein, to grow)], n. (pl. -physes) (Bot.) A cell in the embryo, in flowering plants, from which the root and root-cap are developed; in mosses, an enlarged part of the pedicel beneath the capsule.

hypostasis (hi-, hī pos' tá sis) [late L., from Gr. hupostasis (HYPO-, stasis, standing, basis)], n. (pl. -stases) That which forms the basis of anything; (Metaph.) that by which a thing subsists, substance as distinguished from attributes; the essence or essential principle; (Theol.) the personal subsistence, as opposed to substance, of the Godhead; one of the persons of the Trinity; (Path.) congestion of the blood (in an organ) by weight. hypostatic, -al (-stăt' ik, -ál), a. Pertaining to hypostasis; constitutive or elemental; constituting a distinct personality or substance. hypostatic union: The union of the divine and human natures in Christ. hypostatically, adv. hypostasize (hī pos' tá sīz), v.t. To attribute proper personal existence to; to treat as or make into a substance. hypostasization, -tization (-zā' shún), n.

hypostome (hip' ò-, hī' pò stōm) [F. (HYPO-, Gr. stoma, mouth)], n. (Zool.) A part or organ situated below the mouth, as the proboscis of Hydrozoa, the under lip of a trilobite, etc. hypostoma (-pos' tò má), n. (pl. -mata, -stom' á tá).

hypostyle (hip' ò-, hī' pò stil) [Gr. hupostulos (HYPO-, Gr. stulos, pillar)], a. (Arch.) Having the roof supported by pillars. n. A building with a roof or ceiling supported by pillars; a covered colonnade; a pillared hall.

hyposulphite (hip ò-, hī pò sŭl' fīt) [HYPO-SULPHITE], n. (Chem.) A thiosulphate, a salt of hyposulphurous acid. hyposulphurous, a. Applied to an acid having less oxygen than sulphurous acid.

hypotaxis (hip ò-, hī pò tăk' sis) [HYPO-TAXIS], n. (Gram.) Subordinate construction opp. to parataxis. hypotactic (-tăk' tik), a.

hypotenuse (hi-, hī pot' é nūz) [F. hypoténuse late L. hypotenusa, Gr. hupoteinousa, fem. p.p. of hupoteinein (HYPO-, teinein, stretch)], n. (Geom.) The side of a right-angled triangle opposite to the right angle.

irrefrangible (ir ė frăn' jibl) [IR- (2), REFRANGIBLE], a. Not to be broken, inviolable; (Opt.) not susceptible of refraction.

irrefutable (ir ė fū'-, i ref' ů tȧbl) [F., from L. irrefutābilis (IR- (2), REFUTABLE)], a. Incapable of being refuted. irrefutability (-bil' i ti), n. irrefutably, adv.

irregular (i reg' ů lȧr) [O.F. irreguler, late L. irrēgulāris (IR- (2), REGULAR)], a. Not regular, not according to rule or established principles or custom; departing from rules, not in conformity with law, duty, etc., lawless, disorderly; not according to type, abnormal, asymmetrical; not straight, not direct, not uniform; (Gram.) deviating from the common form in inflexion; (Mil.) not belonging to the regular army. n. One who does not conform to established rule, discipline, authority, etc.; (pl.) irregular troops. irregularity (-lăr' i ti), n. irregularly, adv. irregulous, a. Lawless, licentious.

irrelative (i rel' ȧ tiv) [IR- (2), RELATIVE], a. Not relative, unconnected; (Metaph.) having no relations, absolute. n. That which is without relations. irrelated (ir ė lā' tėd), a. irrelation, n. irrelatively (i rel'-), adv.

irrelevant (i rel' ė vȧnt) [IR- (2), RELEVANT], a. Not applicable or pertinent, not to the point; having no application (to the matter in hand). irrelevance, -vancy, n. irrelevantly, adv.

irreligion (ir ė lij' ȯn) [F. irréligion, L. irreligiōnem, nom. -gio (IR- (2), RELIGION)], n. Indifference or hostility to religion. irreligionist, n. irreligious, a. irreligiously, adv. irreligiousness, n.

irremediable (ir ė mē' di ȧbl) [M.F. irrémédiable, L. irremediābilis (IR- (2), REMEDIABLE)], a. Incurable, irreparable; incapable of being remedied or corrected. irremediableness, n. irremediably, adv.

irremissible (ir ė mis' ibl) [F. irrémissible, L. irremissibilis (IR- (2), REMISSIBLE)], a. That cannot be remitted or pardoned. irremissibility (-bil' i ti), n. irremissibly, adv. irremissive, a. Unremitting.

irremovable (ir ė moo' vȧbl) [IR- (2), REMOVABLE], a. That cannot be removed or displaced, permanent, immovable; *inflexible, determined. irremovability (-bil' i ti), n. irremovably, adv.

irreparable (i rep' ȧ rȧbl) [F., from L. irreparābilis (IR- (2), REPARABLE)], a. Incapable of being repaired, remedied, or restored. irreparability (-bil' i ti), irreparableness, n. irreparably, adv.

irrepealable (ir ė pē' lȧbl) [IR- (2), REPEALABLE], a. Incapable of being repealed, irrevocable. irrepealability (-bil' i ti), n. irrepealably, adv.

irreplaceable (ir ė plā' sȧbl) [IR- (2), REPLACEABLE], a. Not to be made good in case of loss.

irrepressible (ir ė pres' ibl) [IR- (2), REPRESSIBLE], a. Not to be repressed. irrepressibly, adv.

irreproachable (ir ė prō' chȧbl) [F. irreprochable (IR- (2), REPROACHABLE)], a. Blameless, faultless. irreproachability (-bil' i ti), irreproachableness, n. irreproachably, adv.

irreprovable (ir ė proo' vȧbl) [IR- (2), REPROVABLE], a. Irreproachable.

irresistible (ir ė zis' tibl) [late L. irresistibilis (IR- (2), RESISTIBLE)], a. That cannot be resisted; not to be withstood. irresistance, n. irresistibility (-bil' i ti), irresistibleness, n. irresistibly, adv.

irresoluble (i rez' ȯ lůbl) [IR- (2), RESOLUBLE], a. Incapable of being resolved into its elements; indissoluble; insoluble in water.

irresolute (i rez' ō lūt) [L. irresolūtus (IR- (2), RESOLUTE)], a. Not resolute; undecided, hesitating. irresolutely, adv. irresoluteness, irresolution (-lū' shŭn), n.

irresolvable (ir ē zol' văbl) [IR- (2), RESOLVABLE], a. Incapable of being resolved, insoluble; not to be analysed or separated into elements. irresolvability (-bil' i ti), n.

irrespective (ir ē spek' tiv) [IR- (2), RESPECTIVE], a. Not respective, regardless of, without reference to; irrespectively; *disrespectful. irrespectively, adv. Without regard to circumstances or conditions.

irrespirable (i res' pir ăbl, ir ēs pir' ăbl) [IR- (2), RESPIRABLE], a. Not fit to be breathed.

irresponsive (ir ē spon' siv) [IR- (2), RESPONSIVE], a. Not responsive (to). irresponsiveness, n.

irretrievable (ir ē trē' văbl) [IR- (2), RETRIEVABLE], a. Not to be retrieved; irreparable. irretrievability (-bil' i ti), n. irretrievably, adv.

irrevocable (i rev' ō kăbl) [F., from L. irrevocābilis (IR- (2), REVOCABLE)], a. Incapable of being revoked or altered, unalterable. irrevocability (-bil' i ti), irrevocableness, n. irrevocably, adv.

irrigate (ir' i gāt) [L. irrigātus, p.p. of irrigāre (IR- (1), rigāre, to moisten)], v.t. To water (land) by causing a stream to flow over it; to supply (land) with water (of streams); (Med.) to moisten (a wound etc.) with a continuous jet or stream of antiseptic fluid; (fig.) to refresh or fertilize the mind as with a stream. irrigable, a. irrigant, a. Irrigating; n. A ditch for irrigation. irrigative, a. irrigation (ir i gā' shŭn), n. irrigator (ir' i gā tŏr), n. irriguous (i rig' ū ŭs), a.

irrision (i rizh' ŭn) [L. irrīsio -ōnem, from irrīdēre (IR- (1), ridēre, to laugh)], n. Mockery, derision.

irritate (1) (ir' i tāt) [L. irritātus, p.p. of irritāre, prob. freq. of irrire, hirrire, to snarl], v.t. To excite impatience or ill-temper; to fret, to annoy, to exasperate; to stir up, to excite; to cause an uneasy sensation in (the skin, an organ, etc.); to stimulate (an organ) artificially. irritable (ir' i tăbl)], a. Easily provoked, fretful; easily inflamed or made painful, highly sensitive; responsive to artificial stimulation (of nerves, muscles, etc.). irritability (-bil' i ti), irritableness, n. irritably, adv. irritant, a. and n. irritancy (1), n. irritation (-tā' shŭn), n. irritative (ir' i tă tiv), irritatory, a.

irritate (2) (ir' i tāt) [L. irritātus, p.p. of irritāre, from irritus, invalid (IR- (2), ratus, established)], v.t. (Sc. Law) To render null and void. irritancy (2), n. Nullification, invalidity.

irruption (i rŭp' shŭn) [F., from L. irruptiō-nem, nom. -tio, from irrumpere (IR- (1), rumpere, to break), p.p. irruptus], n. A bursting in; a sudden invasion or incursion. irruptive, a.

is (iz) 3rd. pers. sing. pres. ind. [see AM, BE].

isagogic (ī să goj' ik) [L. isagōgicus, Gr. eisagōgikos, from eisagōgē, introduction (eis, into, agōgē, from agein, to lead)], a. Introductory. n.pl. Preliminary investigation regarding the Scriptures, the department of biblical study concerned with literary history, authorship, etc.

isandrous (ī săn' drŭs) [Gr. isos, equal, andros, a male], a. (Bot.) Having the stamens all similar and equal in number to the petals. isantherous (ī săn' thėr ŭs) [ANTHER, -OUS], a. (Bot.) Having equal anthers. isanthrous (ī săn' thŭs) [Gr. anthos, flower], a. (Bot.) Having regular flowers.

isatin (ī' să tin) [L. and Gr. isatis, -IN], n. (Chem.) A compound obtained by oxidizing indigo, crystallizing in yellowish-red prisms. Isatis, n. (Bot.) A genus of cruciferous herbs, comprising I. tinctoria, the woad, cultivated for dyeing.

ischiatic (is ki ăt' ik) [med. L. ischiaticus, ischiadicus, Gr. ischiadikos, from ischion, -ados, pain in the hip, from ischion, hip], a. Pertaining to the hip or to sciatica. ischialgia (is' ki ăl), a. ischialgia (is ki ăl' ji ă) [Gr. -algia, algos, pain], n. (Path.) Pain in the hip-joint, sciatica.

ischuria (is kū' ri ă) [L. ischūria, Gr. ischouria (ischein, to hold, ouria, URINE)], n. (Path.) Retention or suppression of the urine. ischuretic (is kū ret' ik), a. Relieving ischuria; n. An ischuretic medicine.

-ise [O.F. -ise, L. -ītia, -itia, -icia, -itium, -icium (cp. -ICE)], suf. Forming abstract nouns, as franchise, merchandise.

isenergic (ī sė nėr' jik) [Gr. isos, equal, ENERGIC], a. (Phys.) Of or indicating equal energy.

-ish (1) [A.-S. -isc (cp. Dut. and G. -isch, Ice. -iskr, also Gr. iskos)], suf. Of the nature of, pertaining to; rather, somewhat; as in childish, English, outlandish, reddish, yellowish.

-ish (2) [F. -iss-, in pres.p. etc. of verbs in -ir, L. incept. suf. -isc-], suf. Forming verbs as cherish, finish, punish.

Ishmael (ish' mā ėl) [son of Abraham and Hagar], n. (fig.) An outcast (Gen. xvi. 12); one whose hand is against every man.

Islam (iz' lăm, iz lam') [Arab. islām, submission, from salama, he was resigned, whence SALAAM], n. Mohammedanism; (collect.) the believers in Mohammedanism or the peoples under Mohammedan rule. Islamic (iz lăm' ik), Islamitic (-mit' ik), a. Islamism (iz' lă mizm), Islamite, n.

Island (ī' lând) [M.E. iland, A.-S. igland (ig, ieg, -LAND), cp. Icel. eyland, Dut. eiland (s introd. by conf. with foll.)], n. A piece of land surrounded by water; anything isolated or resembling an island; an area in the middle of a highway which divides the traffic and affords a refuge for the pedestrian; (Am.) wood surrounded by prairie; (Anat.) a cluster of cells, mass of tissue, etc., different in formation from those surrounding it. v.t.* To form into an island; to isolate; to dot as with islands. Islands of the Blest: (Gr. Mythol.) Imaginary islands situated in the western ocean, supposed to be the abode of good men after death. islander, n.

Isle (īl) [M.E. ile, O.F. ile, isle, L. insula], n. An island, esp. a small island. v.t.* To form into an island; to isolate. islesman, n. An islander, esp. belonging to the Hebrides, Orkneys, or Shetlands. islet, n. A little island.

-ism (izm) [as foll.], n. A doctrine or system of a distinctive kind (usu. disparagingly). -ismatic, -al (iz măt' ik, -ăl), a. -ismatical-ness, n.

-ism [F. -isme, L. -ismus, Gr. -ismos or -isma, from verbal ending -izein], suf. Forming abstract nouns denoting doctrine, theory, principle, system, etc., as altruism, Conservatism, Socialism, spiritualism, Americanism, Gallicism, scoundrelism.

iso- [Gr. isos], comb. form. Equal; having the same number of parts. isobar (ī' sō bar) [Gr. isobarēs (baros, weight)], n. A line on a metric (-met' rik), a. Of equal barometric pressure; pertaining to isobars. isobathytherm (ī sō băth' i thĕrm) [Gr. bathus, deep, THERM], n. A line connecting points having the same temperature in a vertical section of a part of the sea. isobathythermal, -mic (-thĕr' măl, -mik), a. isobront (ī' sō bront) [Gr. brontē, thunder], n. A line connecting points at which a peal of thunder is heard simultaneously. isochasm (ī' sō kăzm) [CHASM], n. A line connecting points having an equal frequency of auroras. isochasmic (-kăz' mik), a. isocheim (ī' sō kīm) [Gr. cheima, winter (cp. L. hiems)], n. A line connecting places having the same mean winter temperature. isocheimal (-kī' măl), isochimenal, a. Marking equal winters; n. An isochimenal line. isochor (ī' sō kôr) [Gr. chōra, space], n. A line (on a diagram representing relations between pressure and temperature) connecting the points denoting equal volumes. isochoric (-kor' ik), a. isochromatic (ī sō krō măt' ik) [CHROMATIC], a. Of the same colour. isochronal, isochronous (ī sok' rō năl, -nùs), isochronic (-kron' ik) [CHRONIC], a. Denoting or occupying equal spaces of time, esp. performing their beats in the same time (of two or more pendulums). isochronism (ī sok' rō nizm), n. The occupying of an equal space of time; regular periodicity (as the swinging of a pendulum). isochronously, adv. isochroous (ī sok' rō ùs) [Gr. chroa, colour], a. Having a uniform colour throughout. isoclinal, -nic (ī sō klī' năl, -klin' ik) [Gr. klinein, to bend, to slope], a. Having the same inclination or dip; (Geog.) having the same magnetic inclination; (Geol.) having the same angle or dip. isocrymal (ī sō krī' măl) [Gr. krumos, cold], a. Connecting points having the same temperature at the coldest season; n. An isocrymal line. isocryme (ī' sō krīm), n. isodiametric (ī sō di ă met' rik) [DIAMETRIC], a. (Bot. and Cryst.) Equal in diameter. isodimorphic (ī sō di môr' fik) [DIMORPHIC], a. Characterized by isodimorphism. isodimorphism, n. (Cryst.) Isomorphism between substances that are dimorphous. isodomon, -omum (ī sod' ō mŏn, -mùm) [Gr. isodomon (L. -domum), from domos, a layer or course], n. (Arch.) A method of building practised by the ancient Greeks, with blocks of equal length, the vertical joints being above the middle of the blocks immediately below. isodomous, a. isodynamic (ī sō di năm' ik) [DYNAMIC], a. Having equal force, esp. of terrestrial magnetism. isodont (ī' sō dont) [Gr. odous odontos, tooth], a. (Anat.) Having the teeth all alike. isodontous (-don' tùs), a. isogamy (ī sog' ă mi) [Gr. -gamia, marriage], n. (Biol.) The conjugation of two cells or protoplasmic masses not differentiated into male or female. isogamous, a. isogeny (ī soj' ē ni) [-GENY], n. (Biol.) General similarity of origin; general correspondence or homology. isogenous, a. isogeotherm (ī sō jē' ō thĕrm) [GEO-, THERM], n. A line connecting places having the same mean temperature below the surface. isogeothermal, isogeothermic (-thĕr' măl, -mik), a. isognathous (ī sog nă' thùs) [Gr. gnathos, jaw], a. (Zool.) Having the jaws projecting equally. isognathism, n. isogon (ī' sō gon) [-GON], n. (Geom.) A figure having the angles all equal. isogonal (ī sog' ō năl), a. Equiangular; isogonic. isogonic (ɪ) (ī sō gon' ik), a. Connecting points (on the earth's surface) having the same magnetic declination or variation

isolate (ī' sō lāt) [F. isoler, It. isolare, L. insulāre, to INSULATE], v.t. To place in a detached situation; (Elec.) to insulate; (Chem.) to obtain in an uncombined form; to subject to quarantine. isolation (-lā' shŭn), n. isolationist, n. (Am. polit.) One who believes in the policy of holding aloof from all political entanglements with other countries. isolator (ī' sō lā tŏr), n.

isomeric, -al (ī sō mer' ik, -ăl) [Gr. isomerēs (ISO-, meros, share)], a. (Chem.) Having identical elements, molecular weight, and proportions, with difference in physical characteristics or chemical properties owing to different grouping. isomerism (ī som' ĕr izm), n. isomerous, a. (Chem.) Isomeric; (Bot., Zool., etc.) having the parts or segments equal in number. isometric, -al (ī sō met' rik, -ăl) [METRIC], a. Of equal measure. isometric projection: (Eng.) A drawing in approximate perspective from which lengths can be scaled. isomorphism (ī sō mor' fizm) [Gr. morphē, form, -ISM], n. (Cryst.) The property of crystallizing in identical or nearly identical forms; (Math.) identity of form and construction between two or more groups. isomorphic, -phous, a.

isonomy (ī son' ō mi) [Gr. isonomia (ISO-, nomos, law)], n. Equality of political or legal rights.

isopathy (ī sop' ă thi) [ISO-, -PATHY], n. (Med.) The theory that disease may be cured by a product of the same disease. isopathic (-păth' ik), a. isoperimetrical (īs ō per i met' ri kăl) [PERIMETRICAL], a. (Geom.) Having equal perimeters. isoperimetry (-jim' ĕ tri), n. The science of perimetrical figures. isopod (ī' sō pod) [Gr. pous podos, foot], n. (Zool.) One of the Isopoda or sessile-eyed crustaceans characterized by seven pairs of thoracic legs almost of the same length; a. Isopodous. isopodan (ī sop' ō dăn), a. and n. isopodous, a. isopolity (ī sō pol' i ti) [POLITY], n. Equality or reciprocity of civil rights between different states. isopterous (ī sop' tĕr ŭs) [Gr. pteron, wing, -OUS], a. (Ent.) Having the wings equal. isorrhythmic (ī sō rith' mik) [RHYTHMIC], a. (Pros.) Having the same number of time units in the thesis and arsis as a dactyl and an anapæst; composed in the same rhythm, structure, etc.

isosceles (ī sos' ĕ lēz) [late L. īsoscelēs, Gr. isoskelēs, lit. equal-legged (ISO-, skelos, leg)], a. (Geom.) Having two sides equal (of a triangle).

isoseismal (ī sō sīz' măl) [ISO-, SEISMAL], a. (Geol.) Connecting points at which an earthquake has been of the same intensity. n. An isoseismal line. isoseismic, a. isosmotic (ī sōz mot' ik) [OSMOTIC], a. Equal in osmotic pressure. isostatic (ī sō stăt' ik) [STATIC], a. (Geol.) In equilibrium owing to equality of pressure on every side, as that normally prevailing in the crust of the earth; isostasy (ī sos' tă si), n. isotheral (ī sō ther' ăl, -thēr' ăl) [Gr. theros, summer], a. Connecting points having the same mean summer temperature; n. An isotheral line. isotherm (ī' sō thĕrm) [THERM], n. A line on a globe or map passing over places having the same mean temperature. isothermal (-thĕr' măl), a. and n. isotonic (ī sō ton' ik) [Gr. isotonos (ISO-, TONE)], a. (Mus.) Having equal tones; (Physiol.) having equal tension or tonicity (of muscles); isosmotic (of the corpuscles of the blood). isotopes (ī' sō tōps) [Gr. topos, place], n.pl. Varieties of an element, identical in properties but differing in atomic weight. isotropic (ī sō trop' ik) [Gr. isotropos (tropos, way, from trepein, to turn)], a. Manifesting the same physical properties in every direction. isotropous (ī sot' rō pŭs), a. isotropism, isotropy, n.

I-spy [HY- SPY].

Israel (iz' rā ĕl) [L. and Gr. Israēl, Heb. yisrāēl, striver with God], n. (collect.) The Israelites, the Jewish people. Israelite, n. A descendant of Israel, a Jew. Israelitic (-lit' ik), Israelitish (-li' tish), a.

issue (ish' ū, is' ū) [O.F., from pop. L. exītus, L. exitus, from exīre (EX-, īre, to go)], n. The act of passing or flowing out; egress, outgoing, outflow; a discharge, as of blood; way or means of exit or escape, outlet; the mouth of a river; progeny, offspring; the produce of the earth; profits from land or other property; result, consequence; the point in debate; (Law) the point between contending parties; the act of sending or giving out; publication; that which is published at a particular time; the whole quantity or number sent out at one time. v.i. To pass or flow out; to be published; to emerge (from); to be descended; to proceed, to be derived (from); to end or result (in). v.t. To send out; to publish; to put into circulation. at issue: In dispute; at variance. to join or take issue: To take opposite sides upon a point in dispute; (Law) to submit an issue jointly for decision. issuable, a. issuance, n. The act of issuing. issuant, a. (Her.) Emerging or issuing (from a chief). issueless, a. issuer, n.

-ist [F. -iste, L. -ista, Gr. -i·tēs], suf. Denoting an agent, adherent, follower, etc., as Baptist, botanist, Calvinist, fatalist, monogamist, Socialist.

isthmus (is'-, ist' mŭs) [L., from Gr. isthmos], n. (pl. -uses) A neck of land connecting two larger portions of land; (Anat. etc.) a narrow passage or part between two larger cavities or parts. Isthmian, a. Pertaining to an isthmus, esp. to the Isthmus of Corinth in Greece. Isthmian games: Games celebrated in ancient times at Corinth in the first and third years of each Olympiad, forming one of the four great Panhellenic festivals. isthmitis (-mī' tis), n. (Path.) Inflammation of the fauces.

istle (ist' li) [Mex. ixtli], n. A species of Mexican agave, or the tough wiry fibre of its leaves, used for cordage etc.

(it) [A.-S. hit, neut. of hē, HE (cp. Dut. het, Icel. hit)], 3rd pers. neut. pron. (poss. its, pl. they, poss. their, obj. them). The thing spoken about (ref. to noun mentioned or understood); the person understood (esp. in questions and replies, also as subject of a verb the actual subject of which follows, usu. in apposition or introduced by 'that'); the grammatical subject of an impersonal verb; the indefinite object of an intr. or tr. verb (as to rough it, to fight it out); n. (facet.) Sex appeal.

acism (ē' tā sizm) [Gr. ēta, η (cp. IOTACISM)], n. Pronunciation of the Greek η as ē [cp. ETACISM].

metaphysics (met à fiz′ iks) [formerly metaphysic, med. L. metaphysica, Gr. metaphusica (meta ta phusika, after physics, or coming next after the study of natural science)], n.pl. (usu. as sing.) The philosophy of being and knowing; the theoretical principles forming the basis of any particular science; the philosophy of mind. metaphysical, a. Of or pertaining to metaphysics; transcendental, dealing with abstractions; abstruse, over-subtle; imaginary, fantastic. metaphysically, adv. metaphysician (-zish′ ăn), n. metaphysicise (-fiz′ i sīz), v.t. and i.

metaphyte (met′ à fit) [META-, -PHYTE], n. (Bot.) A multicellular plant, opp. to protophyte. metaplasia (met à plā′ zi à) [Gr. -plasia, from plassein, to mould], n. (Physiol.) Change of one form of tissue into another. metaplasm (-plăzm), n. (Biol.) The formative material of protoplasm; (Gram.) Change in a word by alteration of a letter or syllable. metaplastic (-plăs′ tik), a. (Biol.) Relating to metaplasia. metapolitics, n.pl. Abstract political theories of an impractical nature. metapophysis (-pof′ i sis) [Gr. apophusis, a process (APO-, phusis, growth)], n. (pl. -ses) (Anat.) A tubercular prominence on the vertebræ. metastasis (mė tăs′ tà sis) [late L. and Gr. from methistanai, to remove (histanai, to place)], n. (Biol.) Metabolism; (Path.) a change in the seat of a disease from one organ to another. metastatic (-stăt′ ik), a. metatarsus (met à tar′ sùs) [TARSUS], n. (Anat.) That part of the foot between the tarsus and the toes, in man consisting of five long bones. metatarsal, a. metathesis (mė tăth′ ė sis) [L. and Gr., from metatithenai (tithenai, to put)], n. The transposition of sounds or letters in a word; (Surg.) removal of a morbific agent etc. from one place to another; (Chem.) interchange of radicals or groups of atoms in a compound with others. metathetic, -al (-thet′ ik, -ál), a. metathorax (met à thôr′ ăks) [THORAX], n. (Ent.) The posterior segment of the thorax in an insect. metatome (met′ à tōm) [Gr. -tomē, cutting, rel. to temnein, to cut], n. (Arch.) The space between two dentils.

metayer (mė tā′ ėr) [F., from med. L. medietārius, from medietas, MOIETY], n. A cultivator paying a certain proportion of the produce to the landlord, who provides seed, stock, etc. metayage, n.

Metazoa (met à zō′ à) [META-, Gr. zōa, pl. of zōon, animal], n.pl. (Zool.) A primary division of the animal kingdom including all animals in which the germs are differentiated into a mass of cells which may or may not be developed into more complex tissues. metazoan, a. Pertaining to the Metazoa; n. Any individual of the Metazoa. metazoic, a.

mete (1) (mēt) [A.-S. metan (cp. Dut. meten, G. messen)], v.t. To measure; to allot, to apportion (out); to appraise; to be the measure of. v.i.* To measure; to aim. metewand, *meteyard, n. A measuring-rod.

mete (2) (mēt) [O.F., from L. meta, a goal], n. A limit, a boundary.

metempiric (met em pir′ ik) [META-, EMPIRIC], n. The science of things lying beyond the bounds of experience; one who believes in this. metempirical, a. metempiricism, n. metempiricist, n.

metempsychosis (mė temp′ si kō′ sis) [late L., from Gr. metempsuchōsis (MET-, en, in, psuchē, soul, see PSYCHE, -OSIS)], n. The passage of the soul after death from one animal body to another.

metensomatosis (met en sō mà tō′ sis) [Gr. (META-, en, in, soma -atos, body, -OSIS)], n. The transference of the elements of one body into another body as by decomposition and assimilation.

meteor (mē′ tė ór) [Gr. meteōron, n. from adj. meteōros, raised (META-, eōra, var. of aiōra, from aeirein, to raise)], n. A luminous body appearing for a few moments in the sky and then disappearing, a shooting-star; any atmospheric phenomenon, as rain, hail, etc.; (fig.) anything which transiently dazzles or strikes with wonder. meteoric (-or′ ik), a. Pertaining to or consisting of meteors; resembling a meteor; (fig.) brilliant but fading quickly, dazzling; of or pertaining to the atmosphere or its phenomena. meteorite (mē′-), n. A fallen meteor; stone, metal, or a compound of earth and metal, that has fallen upon the earth from space. meteorolite, n. meteorograph, n. An instrument for recording meteorological phenomena. meteorography (-og′ rà fi), n.

meteoroid, n. meteoroidal (-oi' dăl), a. meteorology (-ol' ŏ ji), n. The science of the atmosphere and its phenomena, esp. for the purpose of forecasting the weather; the general character of the weather in a particular place. meteorologic, -al (-loj' ik, -ăl), a. meteorologically, adv. meteorologist (-ol' ŏ jist), n. meteorous (mē' tē-, mē tē' ŏ rŭs), a. Meteoric.

meter (1) (mē' tĕr) [METE (1), -ER], n. One who or that which measures, esp. instruments for registering the quantity of gas, water, electric energy, etc., supplied. meterage, n. meter (2) [METRE (1 and 2)].

-meter [Gr. metron, measure], suf. A measuring instrument; as barometer, thermometer.

methane (meth' ān) [METH, -YL, -ANE], n. (Chem.) A light, colourless gas, methyl hydride or carburetted hydrogen, produced by the decomposition or dry distillation of vegetable matter, one of the chief constituents of coal-gas, and also of fire-damp and marsh-gas. methanometer (-nom' ē tĕr), n.

metheglin (mē theg' lin) [W. meddyglyn (meddyg, L. medicus, healing, llyn, liquor)], n. A variety of mead, orig. Welsh.

methinks (mē thinks') [ME, dat. A.-S. thyncan, to seem, cogn. with THINK], v.impers. (past -thought, -thawt) It seems to me; I think.

method (meth' ŏd) [F. méthode, L. methodus, Gr. methodos (METH-, hodos, way)], n. Mode of procedure, way or order of doing; an orderly, systematic, or logical arrangement; orderliness, system; a system or the basis of a system of classification. methodic, -al (mē thod' ik, -ăl), a. methodically, adv.

Methodism (meth' ŏ dizm) [prec., -ISM], n. The doctrines, practices, or Church system of the Methodists. Methodist, n. A strict observer of method in philosophical inquiry or medical practice; a member of any of the religious bodies that have grown out of the evangelical movement begun in the middle of the 18th cent. by John Wesley (1703–91), his brother Charles, and George Whitefield (1714–70). methodistic, -al (-dis' tik, -ăl), a. methodistically, adv.

methodize (meth' ŏ dīz) [METHOD, -IZE], v.t. To reduce to order; to arrange systematically. methodizer, n. methodology (-dol' ŏ ji) [-LOGY], n. (Log.) The branch of logic dealing with the methods of accurate thinking.

methomania (meth ŏ mā' ni ă) [Gr. methē, drink, drunkenness, -MANIA], n. (Path.) Morbid craving for intoxicating drink.

methyl (meth' il) [F. méthyle, from methylène (Gr. methu, wine, hulē, wood)], n. (Chem.) The hypothetical radical of wood spirit, formic acid, and many other organic compounds. methylate (meth' i lāt), v.t. To mix or saturate with methyl alcohol. methylated spirit: Spirit of wine, mixed with 10 per cent. of methyl alcohol so as to be rendered unfit to drink and accordingly duty-free. methylene, n. A hypothetical organic radical in which two atoms of hydrogen are in chemical combination with one atom of carbon, occurring in numerous compounds. methylic (-thil' ik), a.

metic (mēt' ic) [Gr. metoikos, resident alien], n. Immigrant, resident alien.

meticulous (mē tik' ū lŭs) [L. meticulōsus, from metus, fear], a. Cautious or overscrupulous about trivial details, finical; *cautious, timid. meticulously, adv. meticulousness, n.

métier (met' yā) [F., earlier mestier, pop. L. misterium, L. ministerium, MINISTRY], n. Trade, profession, one's particular 'line.'

métis (mā' tēs, mā tēs') [F. métis, MESTIZO], n. One of mixed blood, esp. (in Canada) the offspring of a European and American Indian.

metonic (mē ton' ik) [Metōn, -IC], a. Pertaining to Meton, Athenian astronomer, applied to the cycle of 19 Julian years at the end of which the new and full moons recur on the same dates.

metonymy (mē ton' i mi) [late L. metōnymia, Gr. metōnumia (META-, onoma, Æolic onuma, name)], n. A figure in which one word is used for another, as the effect for the cause, the material for the thing made, etc., e.g. "bench" for "magistrates." metonymic, -al (-nim' ik, -ăl), a. metonymically, adv.

metope (1) (met' ŏ pi) [Gr. metopē (MET-, opē, hole for a beam)], n. (Arch.) The space between the triglyphs in a Doric frieze.

metope (2) (met' ŏp) [Gr. metōpon, forehead], n. (Zool.) The face or front (of a crab). metopic (-top' ik), a. Frontal. metopism (met' ŏ pizm), n. Persistence of the frontal suture. metoposcopy (met ŏ pos' kŏ pi), n. The study of physiognomy. metoposcopic (-skop' ik), a. metoposcopist, n.

metre (1) (mē' tĕr) [O.F., from L. metrum, Gr. metron, measure], n. The rhythmical arrangement of syllables in verse; verse; any particular form of poetic rhythm. metric (1), a. Metrical; n. (usu. in pl.) The science or art of metre, prosody. metrical, a. Of, pertaining to, or composed in metre; of or pertaining to measurement. metrically, adv. metrician (mē trish' ăn), metrist (mēt' rist), n. One skilled in metres; a versifier. metrify (mēt' ri fī), v.t.

metre (2) (mē' tĕr) [F. mètre, as prec.], n. The French standard measure of length, the ten-millionth part of the quadrant of a meridian, 39·37 in. metre-ampere, n. (Wire.) A measure of the power which a transmitter radiates. metre-bridge, n. (Elec.) Wheatstone bridge of slide-wire pattern with one-metre length wire. metric (2), a.

metro- [Gr. metron, measure], comb. form. metrograph (mēt' rŏ grăf) [-GRAPH], n. A contrivance on a locomotive indicating the speed of trains with the number and duration of the stoppages. metrology (mē trol' ŏ ji) [-LOGY], n.

metronome (met' rŏ nōm) [F. métronome (Gr. nomos, law, rule)], n. An instrument for indicating and marking time in music by means of a pendulum. metronomic (-nom' ik), a. metronomically, adv. metronomy (mē tron' ŏ mi), n.

metronymic (mē trō nim' ik) [Gr. mētrōnumikos (mētēr -tros, mother, onoma, onuma, name)], a. Derived from the name of a mother or maternal ancestor (of names). n. A name so derived. metronymy (-tron' i mi), n.

metropolis (mē trop' ō lis) [L. and Gr. mētropolis, mother-state (mētēr -tros, mother, polis, city)], n. The chief town or capital of a country; the seat or see of a metropolitan bishop; (fig.) a centre or focus of activity etc. metropolitan (-pol' i tán), a. Pertaining to a capital city or to an archbishopric. n. A bishop having authority over other bishops in a province, in the Western Church an archbishop, in the ancient and in the modern Greek Church ranking above an archbishop and next to a patriarch; forming part of a sovereign state as distinct from its colonies. metropolitanate, n. metropolite (mē trop' ō lit), n. metropolitical (-pō lit' i kál), metropolitic (-pol' i tic), a.

-metry [Gr. metria, measurement, from metrēs, measurer, see -METER], suf. Science of measuring; as geometry, trigonometry.

mettle (metl) [var. of METAL], n. Quality of temperament or disposition; constitutional ardour; spirit, courage; stuff, material one is made of. mettled, mettlesome, a. High-spirited, fiery, ardent. mettlesomeness, n.

meuse (mūs, mūz) [O.F. muce, from musser, muchier, to hide (cp. MICHE, MOUCH)], n. A gap in a fence etc. through which a hare runs; (fig.) a way of escape, a loophole.

mew (1) (mū) [A.-S. mæw (cp. Dut. meeuw, Icel. mar, G. möwe)], n. A kind of sea-gull, esp. Larus canus.

mew (2) (mū) [imit.], v.i. To cry 'mew' as a cat. n. This cry of the cat.

mew (3) (mū) [O.F. mue, from muer, L. mūtāre, to change], n. A cage for hawks, esp. whilst moulting; a place of confinement; a den; (pl.) royal stables in London (built on the spot where the royal hawks were formerly mewed); (pl.) stables for carriage-horses etc. v.t. *To moult, to shed (the feathers); to put (a hawk) in a mew or cage; (fig.) to shut (up), to confine. v.i. To shed the feathers.

mewl (mūl) [imit., cp. MEW MIAUL], v.i. To cry, whine, or whimper, as a child; to mew (as a cat). mewler, n.

Mexican (mek' si kán) [Sp. Mexicano, from Mexico], a. Of or pertaining to Mexico. n. A native or inhabitant of Mexico.

mezereon (mē zēr' i ón) [med. L., from Arab. māzaryūn], n. A small ornamental shrub, Daphne mezereum.

mezzanine (mez' á nēn, -nin) [F., from It. mezzanino, dim. of mezzano, L. mediānus, MEDIAN], n. A low storey between two higher ones; a window in such storey; (Theat.) a floor beneath the stage from which the traps etc. are worked. mezzanine-floor, -window, n.

mezzo (med' zō) [It., from L. medius, middle], a. Half or medium. mezzo-soprano, n. A voice lower than a soprano and higher than a contralto; a singer with such a voice. mezzo-rilievo (med' zō ré lyā' vō), n. (pl. -os) Half-relief, sculpture in which the figures stand out from the background to a half of their proportions.

mezzotint, *mezzotinto (med' zō tint, -tin' tō) [It. mezzotinto (MEZZO, tinto, TINT)], n. A process of engraving in which a copper plate is uniformly roughened so as to print a deep black, lights and half-lights being then produced by scraping away the burr; a print from this. v.t. To engrave in mezzotint.

mho (mō) [ohm reversed], n. (Elec.) Unit of conductivity.

mi (mē) [It., orig. first syl. of L. mīra, see GAMUT], n. The third note of the diatonic scale.

miaow (mi ou') [imit., cp. F. miaou], n. The cry of a cat. v.t. To cry 'miaow' (of a cat).

miasma (mi ăz' má) [Gr., from miainein, to pollute], n. (pl. -mata) Poisonous or infectious exhalation, malaria. miasm (mī' ăzm), n. miasmal (mi ăz' mál), miasmatic, -al (mī áz măt' ik, -ál), miasmatous, miasmic, miasmous (mi ăz' má tùs, -mik, -mùs), a. miasmology (-mol' ó ji), n.

miaul (mi awl') [F. miauler, imit.], v.t. To cry 'miaow' (of a cat). v.t. To sing or utter with the voice of a cat. miauler, n. A cat.

mica (mī' ká) [L., a crumb], n. (Min.) A name for a group of silicates having a perfect basal cleavage into thin, tough, and shining plates, formerly used instead of glass. mica-schist, -slate, n. micaceous (mi kā' shùs), a.

mice, pl. [MOUSE]. mich [MICHE].

Michaelmas (mik' él más) [L. Michael, Heb. Mikhāel, who is like God, MASS (1)], n. The feast of St. Michael the Archangel, 29 Sept.; (colloq.) autumn. Michaelmas-daisy, n. The wild aster, Aster tripolium; also various perennial cultivated asters.

miche (mich) [prob. from O.North. F. muchier, O.F. mucier (F. musser), from Teut. (cp. O.H.G. mūhhōn, to hide, G. dial. maucheln, to hide, to cheat)], v.i. To hide, to skulk, to play truant. micher, n.

miching malicho (mich' ing măl' i kō) [Shak. (MICHE, -ING, malicho, of uncertain meaning)]: Sneaking or stealthy mischief.

mickle (mikl) [A.-S. micel, mycel], a. (now chiefly Sc.). Much, great. n. A large amount.

micky (mik' i) [fam. form of Michael, see MICHAELMAS], n. (Austral. slang) A young wild bull; (Am. slang) an Irish lad.

micr-, micro- [Gr. mikros, small], comb. form. Noting smallness; pertaining to small things (as opposed to large ones). micracoustic (mi krá kou' stik) [F. micracoustique (ACOUSTIC)], a. Serving to increase small or indistinct sounds. n. An instrument for augmenting sounds for the partially deaf.

microbe (mī' krōb) [F. (MICRO-, Gr. bios, life)], n. Any minute organism, esp. a bacterium or microzyme causing disease or fermentation. microbial, -ian, -bic (mi krō' bi ál, -bi án, -bik), a. microbiology (-bi ol ó ji), n. microbiologist, n.

(pl.-cocci, -kok' sī) One of a genus of minute spherical bacteria, usu. regarded as fission-fungi.

microcosm (mī' krō kozm) [F. microcosme, med. L. microcosmus, Gr. mikrokosmos (MICRO-, COSMOS)], n. The universe on a small scale; man as an epitome of the macrocosm or universe; a little community; a representation (of) in little. microcosmic (-koz' mik), a. microcosmography (-mog' rá fi), n. microcosmology (-mol' ó ji), n.

microcrith (mī' krō krith) [MICRO-, Gr. krithē, barley-corn], n. (Chem.) The weight of an atom of hydrogen. microcyte (mī' krō sīt) [-CYTE], n. (Path.) A small red blood-corpuscle, such as appear in cases of anæmia. microcythæmia (-thē' mi á), microcytosis (-tō' sis), n. microdont (mī' krō dont) [Gr. odous odontos, tooth], n. Having abnormally small teeth. micro-farad (mī krō făr' ăd) [FARAD], n. (Elec.) A unit of electrical measurement, one-millionth of a farad. microfilm (mī' crō film), n. A strip of cinematograph film on which successive pages of a document or book are photographed for purposes of record. microgeology (mī krō jē ol' ó ji) [GEOLOGY], n. The department of geology dealing with microscopic structures. micrograph (mī' krō grăf) [-GRAPH], n. A kind of pantograph for extremely minute engraving; a very small picture, photograph, etc. micrography (-krog' rá fi), n. A description of microscopic objects. micrographer, n. micrographic (-grăf' ik), a. microhm (mī' krōm) [OHM], n. (Elec.) A unit of electrical measurement, one-millionth of an ohm. microlite (mī' krō līt) [-LITE], n. (Min.) A native salt of calcium found in small crystals; microlith. microlith, n. (Min.) One of the microscopic bodies found in vitreous feldspar, hornblende, etc. microlithic (mī krō lith' ik) [LITHIC], a. (Archæol.) Applied to a particular style of funeral monuments, in which extremely small stones are used. micrology (mī krol' ó ji) [-LOGY], n. The branch of science dealing with microscopic objects, excessive concern with petty matters, over-minuteness, hair-splitting. micrological (-loj' i kăl), a. micrologically, adv. micrologist (-krol' ó jist), n. micrometer (mī krom' ė tėr) [-METER], n. (Astron. and Microscopy) An instrument to measure small distances or objects. micrometric, -al (-met' rik, -ăl), a. micron (mī' crŏn), n. The millionth of a metre. microphone (mī' krō fōn) [-PHONE], n. An instrument for converting sound into electrical waves; (Wire.) the mouthpiece for broadcasting. microphone amplifier, n. (Wire.) A low-frequency amplifying circuit attached to a microphone. microphonic (-fon' ik), a. Pertaining to the microphone; n.pl. The branch of acoustics dealing with the magnifying of weak sounds. microphotography (mī krō fō tog' rá fi) [PHOTOGRAPHY], n. The photography of objects on a minute scale; the photography of microscopic objects. microphotograph, n. microphylline (mī krō fil' in) [Gr. phullon, leaf, -INE], a. (Bot.) Composed of or having minute leaflets or scales. microphyllous, a. Having small leaves.

microphyte (mī' krō fīt) [-PHYTE], n. A microscopic vegetable organism, esp. a bacterium. micropodal (mī krop' ó dăl) [Gr. pous podos, foot, -AL], a. Having abnormally small feet. micropsia (mī krop' si á) [Gr. -opsia, vision], n. (Path.) A state of vision in which objects appear unnaturally small. micropterous (mī krop' tėr ŭs) [Gr. pteron, wing], n. (Zool.) Having small wings or fins. micropyle (mī' krō pīl) [Gr. pulē, gate], n. (Zool.) A minute opening in the external membrane of the ova by which spermatozoa may enter; (Bot.) the foramen in an ovule by which the pollen reaches the apex of the nucleus; the aperture representing this in the ripe seed.

microscope (mī' krō skōp) [MICRO-, -SCOPE], n. An optical instrument by which objects are so magnified that details invisible to the naked eye are clearly seen. microscopic (-skop' ik), a. Pertaining to the microscope; too small to be visible except by the aid of a microscope. microscopically, adv. microscopy (-kros' kō pi), n. microscopist, n.

microseism (mī' krō sizm) [MICRO-, Gr. seismos, earthquake], n. A slight tremor or vibration of the earth's crust. microseismic (-sīz' mik), a. microseismograph (-sīz' mo grăf), n. An instrument for recording microseisms. microseismology (-mol' ó ji), n. microseismometry (-mom' ė tri), n. microsoma (mī krō sō' má) [Gr. sōma, body)], n. (pl. -mata) (Biol.) One of the minute granules in the endoplasm of protoplasmic cells. microsome (mī' krō sōm), n. microsomatous (-sō' má tŭs), a. microspectroscope (mi krō spek' trō skōp) [SPECTROSCOPE], n. A combination of microscope and spectroscope for examining minute traces of substances. microsporangium (mī krō spó răn' ji ŭm) [SPORANGIUM], n. (Bot.) A sporangium containing microspores. microspore (mī' krō spôr) [-SPORE], n. (Bot.) A small spore, sexual in function, as in the Selaginellæ; (Path. etc.) a parasitic fungus with small spores; (Zool.) a spore-like body in certain protozoa. microsporous (-spôr' ŭs), a. microtome (mī' krō tōm) [Gr. -tomos, cutting, from root of temnein, to cut], n. An instrument for cutting thin sections for microscopic examination. microtomic, -al (-tom' ik, -ăl), a. microtomist (-krot' ó mist), n. microtomy, n. microzoa (mī krō zō' á) [Gr. zōa, pl. of zōon, a living creature], n.pl. (Zool.) Microscopic animals. microzoic, -zoal, a. microzoan, a. and n. microzoöid, a. and n. microzyme (mī' krō zīm) [Gr. zumē, yeast], n. Any of the minute organisms floating in the air, probably the germs of certain infectious diseases.

micturition (mik tū rish' ŭn) [L. micturire, desiderative of mingere, to make water, -ITION], n. A morbid desire to make water; (incorr.) the act of making water.

mid (mid) [A.-S. mid, midd (cp. Dut., Swed. and Dan. mid-, O.H.G. mitti, L. medius, Gr. mesos)], a. (superl. midmost) Middle (usu. in comb.). n.* The middle. prep. (poet.) Amid. mid-age, n. Middle age midday, n. Noon; a. Pertaining to noon mid-heaven, n. mid-iron, n. (Golf) An iron club with a moderate amount of loft.

mid-off, n. (Cricket) The fieldsman to the left of the bowler. mid-on, n. The fields man to the right of the bowler.

Midas (mī' dăs) [legendary king of Phrygia to whom Dionysus granted the power of turning all he touched into gold], n. (fig.) A fabulously rich man.

midden (midn) [M.E. midding, from Scand. (cp. Dan. mödding, cogn. with MUCK, dynge, heap)], n. A dunghill. kitchen-midden [KITCHEN].

middle (midl) [A.-S. middel, from midd, MID (cp.
